SOMETHING NEW!

THE NEW LIGHT!

DANFORD'S

Atmospheric Coal Oil Gas Lamp!

ARTIFICIAL LIGHT OF SOME SORT, IS A UNIversal necessity. A Safe, Cheap and Brilliant one is a Luxury—a luxury only enjoyed heretofore by those who live in large cities where Gas is used. Years of study and much capital have been exhausted in experiments to produce a lamp wherein the ordinary Kerosene or Coal Oil could be used without a chimney and without unpleasant odor while in use. That fruitful source of expense, trouble and annoyance, the chimney, is in DANFORD'S COAL OIL GAS LAMP avoided. It is the most perfect Lamp and will entirely supersede all other Coal Oil Lamps; it is the cheapest artificial light that can be used yielding the light of an ordinary six foot Gas burner for less than ½ cent per hour, or double the quantity of light of an ordinary Chimney Lamp for one third the cost. It will burn when turned down to a taper-light ten hours for a cent, is free from smoke, can be carried from room to room and the wind will not blow it out. These LAMPS will be on exhibition and for sale at the Music and Art Gallery of Bernal ... & Dufrene, corner of Morrison and First streets

THE ARM IN ARM FARCE.—That our readers may more thoroughly appreciate the arm in arm farce perpetrated at the Philadelphia Convention, when Custer saluted the rebel flag and the delegates boohooed, we make a few extracts from prominent Southern journals

[From the Charlottesville (Va.) Chronicle.]

South Carolina walking down the aisle of the Philadelphia Convention, weeping on the bosom of Massachusetts was one of the most touching pictures since the laying of the Atlantic Cable. If that doesn't melt the North then they are a stolid race. It seemed to us in a figure John C. Calhoun penitentially embracing the knees of John Quincy Adams, crying, "Oh, my Lord, have mercy."

[From the Richmond (Va.) Enquirer.]

Did Mr. Orr go to Philadelphia to confess that his State lay on an extreme as far out from truth and justice as Massachusetts? That she was an equal offender? That, indeed, has often been charged against her, but it has not been confessed until now, when her suffering and her sorrows make it impossible without shame. And by her own son! Perhaps a capacity for dirt eating is not without its uses, and hence, that Mr. Orr is in the right place, but we reject any implied assumption of Southern leadership or impersonation, for South Carolina, as connected with the late performance.

[From the Mobile Times.]

It must have been a thrilling spectacle when Massachusetts and South Carolina—represented by Gen. Couch and Guv Orr—entered the Philadelphia Convention arm in arm. One enthusiastic observer, with a strong faculty for similitudes, recognized in this occurrence the fulfillment of the prediction concerning the lion (couch-ant) and the lamb (probably Gov. Orr looked a little sheep ish) lying together—the ardent affection they professed for each other sufficing for the lying. It is also understood, though the published dispatches do not state it, that they walked under one umbrella—that being regarded as the most perfect symbol of unanimity suggesting "two souls with but a single thought" (how to escape the rain—viz the reign of Stevens & Co.) and in compliment to the South the umbrella was cotton—thereby also denoting the newborn disposition of the Northern and Southern representatives to cotton together. The color of the umbrella was, very appropriately, green.

We no less despise than fear all those unmeaning theatrical displays, of which our country has given so many disgusting spectacles, from the unhitching of Fanny Essler's horses to the vulgar flatteries lavished on the murderers of Poland, when a Russian frigate last visited New York. Our lachrymatory powers (continues the Times), are much too hard to be moved into action, and turn the fountain of tears into the channel of repentance, for what we did and thought, believing it then, as now, just and holy in the eyes of God and man."

[From the Columbus (Ga.) Sun.]

Feeling assured that he would have stood upon his head wrapped in the United States flag, and surrounded by Roman candles, blue and red lights, whirligigs, and all the other pyrotechnic adjuncts known to a first class theatre, if it had been demanded by the managers of the Convention, and would have concentrated public attention upon himself, we are surprised the Governor did not make his advent with the Massachusetts General more appropriate and striking by bearing in his hand the Palmetto tree, while his partner in the procession displayed a dried codfish.

PENNSYLVANIA.—The Tribune's special has the following

All accounts received here make Pennsylvania certain for General Geary by at least 30,000 majority. The campaign on the part of the radicals is being carried out with great zeal, and the enthusiasm of the people throughout the State show their sentiments. The indications are that the radicals will gain three Congressmen. The two most doubtful districts are the third and fifth, of the county of Philadelphia, represented in the present Congress by Leonard Myers and M. Russell Thayer respectively, both radicals. Myers will be renominated but Thayer declines a renomination. The Copperheads will nominate none but those of the most ultra stripe, and in this manner the radicals, by nominating good men, feel confident of carrying the above-named districts. In Judge Kelley's district (the fourth) the Johnson men are using time and money to defeat Judge Kelley. The Democrats have united with the few renegade Republicans, and have asked no less than a dozen of prominent supposed conservative Republicans of Kelley's own ward to accept a nomination against him, but all refused. Kelley will be renominated by acclamation by the District Convention. His opponent will be A. J. Drexel the banker. At the last election Kelley's majority was 3 200. It is asserted that the Johnson men have raised $200,000 to carry the Pennsylvania election. This large amount of money, together with the sweeping removals of radicals from Federal offices in the State recently made by President Johnson, it is believed by the Copperheads will carry the State for Clymer. A number of prominent Pennsylvania Copperhead politicians have been maneuvering around here, and it seems the above is the result of their work. General Rousseau, that fighting patriot of the ultra loyal State of Kentucky, leaves here to aid his Copperhead friends in the Keystone State by relating the story of the Grinnell Rousseau affair on the stump. No wonder that Johnson men are making such desperate efforts to secure the old Keystone State, for as Pennsylvania goes in October, so will New York, New Jersey, Illinois, and the other States, go in November.

LETTER FROM JOHN G. WHITTIER.—The following interesting letter from John G. Whittier has been received by the Secretary of the Republican State Committee of Massachusetts,

AMESBURY, 8th mo, 24, 1866

Wm S Robinson, Secretary Republican State Committee—Dear Sir, I regret that the state of my health will not allow me the privilege of accepting the invitation of the Republican State Committee of Massachusetts, to meet and welcome the Southern loyalists at Philadelphia on the 3d of next month. My heart is with these noble men, who come up from the furnace of rebellion without the smell of its infernal fires on their garments. I would like to say to them, and through them to the people of the States they represent, that we yield to none in the desire for the restoration of these States to their place in Congress, in the speediest manner consistent with the safety of the Union—in other words, whenever the rights of their inhabitants are secured, and the monstrous inequality of representation growing out of slavery has become so adjusted that a rebel in South Carolina shall not have double the political power of a loyal white man in one of the New England States. Massachusetts cherishes no hatred towards the South; no representative of hers has withheld his vote for appropriations for its benefit on sectional grounds; no Massachusetts citizen has hesitated to minister to the necessities of Southern cities under the calamities of plague or fire, the same hands that aided the hunted loyalists of East Tennessee have been extended to feed the starving rebels of Savannah. We have no desire of revenge to gratify; and where, in the nature of things, we cannot wholly forget, we are ready to forgive as we would be forgiven. I am truly thy friend

JOHN G WHITTIER.

THE CAMPAIGN IN ILLINOIS.—The campaign in Illinois opens with the promise of a magnificent victory in November. The spirit of 1861 swells the popular heart. The same resolution, the same indignation, the same enthusiasm that burned in the breasts of the people when the news came that traitors were marching on the capitol, are again in full play. We see a like peril impending over the nation—the only difference being a change of leaders. The rebel hordes are again moving on the capitol, and loyal men must come to the rescue. This is the whole substance of the fall campaign. Andrew Johnson hopes to elect enough Copperheads to Congress to constitute, with Orr, and Stephens and Dick Taylor, and the rest of the pardoned rebels, a majority of the national legislature whereupon he intends to unseat the loyal Congress and precipitate the country into another civil war. To meet this tremendous peril and to avert this matchless calamity, the people are coming up in their power and might from every quarter of the State. They will say to Andrew Johnson in November in the tones of thunder. "You shall neither put your whitewashed Confederates in Congress to rule over us, nor shall you draw the sword or rob the treasury of the nation to intimidate our Representatives in the discharge of their lawful duties."

It is for Illinois, which gave Abraham Lincoln to the nation, and which now holds his lamented ashes, to set a glorious example to her sister States in the coming election. To the dead heroes who lie on every battle-field from Belmont to Mobile, we owe the duty of braving the new danger which assails the country, and battling the enemy who comes to conquer at the ballot-box what he could not achieve at the cannon's mouth. The basis of the restored Union must and shall be liberty and loyalty. We fought four years to secure the rights of American citizens in all parts of America, yet we have hardly grounded our arms when we are appalled by the New Orleans massacre, which tells too plainly that the fiendish spirit which brought on the war is alive again and that it is capable of anything. This spirit must be put down if it takes another war and another generation to do it. Illinois will do her full share of the task, in any kind of a fight that may present itself. She will begin in the November election, and she will keep it up till the last rebel surrenders, and until the principle is established that loyal men have the right to dictate the terms on which conquered traitors may participate in the government of the country.—Chicago Tribune.

ON THE ORIGIN OF PRAIRIES.—The following is an abstract of an interesting paper on The Origin of Prairies, read by Professor J. S. Newberry recently

Dr. Newberry said that great diversity of opinion existed as to the causes which had produced over half our continent a growth of forests, and over the other half only an herbaceous vegetation, but in this, as in so many other questions that divided the scientific world, if the disputants could meet on common ground, and each study the phenomena observed by others, and not exclusively his own data, there would be comparatively little discord. He had spent some years on the prairies in the various parts of the far West and he felt confident that any one who would go over the ground he had traversed would agree with him that the presence of forests as a general rule depended on the amount of precipitated moisture. The central portion of this continent, as others, was comparatively dry, and was consequently treeless, except on the mountain belts, which acted as condensers, and precipitated an amount of water which sustained a forest growth, the rain-fall was greater in that part of the continent east of the Mississippi, and here we have almost an unbroken forest.

Along the line where the treeless and forest districts meet, local causes determine the presence or absence of trees. Belts of timber bordered the streams and covered the more porous and absorbent soils, while level surfaces, with a fine and unporous soil, sometimes very wet and sometimes very dry, sustained only a growth of grass, which could endure their alternations, fatal to trees. Annual fires had their influence in extending the area of grassy surface, and over much of this middle ground, by man's intervention, the causes limiting the growth of trees could be removed and their forest area extended. The forces of nature was here nicely balanced, and slight causes would make one or the other preponderate. The many theories which attributed prairies to other causes than the want of water were wholly erroneous, of only local value. On the great prairies west of the Mississippi, every variety of soil and surface failed to sustain trees, and there only a change of climatic conditions would change the grass-covered surface to forest.

REPORT OF THE INVESTIGATING COMMISSION ON THE NEW ORLEANS RIOTS.—A New York Times New Orleans special of August 25th, says: The Commission appointed by General Baird to investigate the late riot, have completed their labors, and their report will show that the first shot fired from a revolver was by a white man at the procession of freedmen. Twenty minutes then expired before any further disturbance took place. When the procession reached the place where the Convention was in session, the police interfered with it, and, in attempting to make arrests, fired upon the freedmen, who returned the fire. A mob of citizens then joined the police, and the great massacre commenced. It also shows that several police ... hid their badges, so as not to be recognized, and, after entering the hall, they disregarded the white flag, and fired indiscriminately upon the unarmed members of the Convention and spectators. Some of the citizens wore badges, indicating an organization. Those in the room then, with chairs, &c., drove the police and attacking party out, and barricaded the doors. After the barricade was established, not a single person in the building escaped unharmed, and about thirty were murdered. While credit is given to the police for saving the lives of all who were in the building, and are not now dead, the force is found guilty of nearly all the murders that were committed. The evidence shows that the policemen killed freedmen when they could have arrested them without trouble, and that wounded negroes were thrown in a cart while struggling to free themselves from the dead bodies which had been placed on the top of them.

The Commission will report that the riot was caused by bitter feelings on the part of the citizens and police toward the radical Unionists and freedmen, and will also probably report that it was preconcerted, inasmuch as it is in evidence that it was talked of previously for several days. It is the opinion of the Commission that if the military had not appeared at the time it did, the riot would have progressed to the extermination of all the Unionists and freedmen in the city.

The city press are attacking General Sheridan for what he reported in his official despatches, charging him with untruthfulness."

WISE'S PROPERTY TO BE RESTORED.—General Schofield, who was sent by the President to command at Richmond in place of General Terry, assigned to other duty, has commenced, says the St. Louis Democrat, illustrating the purposes for which he was selected. By his order, all the property formerly belonging to the rebel Wise has been gathered up for restoration to that eminently "loyal" man—of the Johnson stripe. The dispatch, as received in this city, stated that "the present possessors" of such property, officers of the Government who were using it as by law they were authorized to do, were "despoiled of it in a hasty and rather unceremonious manner," but it was Johnsonized by the Republican and that statement carefully omitted. This Wise is the individual who recently declared in a speech that he was a rebel still, had not asked for pardon, and never should. His "chivalric" and "high toned" spirit is promptly rewarded by the extra effort to restore to him all confiscated property. And thus "treason is made odious."

An auctioneer was selling a library at auction. He was not very well read in books, but he scanned their titles, trusted to luck, and went ahead. "Here you have," he said, "Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress; how much 'm I offered for it! How much do I hear for the Pilgrim's Progress, by John Bunyan? 'Tis a first rate book, gentleman, with six superior illustrations, how much do I hear? All about the Pilgrims, by John Bunyan! Tells where they came from, an' where they landed! Here's a picture of one of 'em going about Plymouth peddling, with a pack on his back!"

SOMETHING NEW!
THE NEW LIGHT!
DANFORD'S
Atmospheric Coal Oil Gas Lamp!

ARTIFICIAL LIGHT OF SOME SORT, IS A UNIversal necessity. A Safe, Cheap and Brilliant one is a Luxury—a luxury only enjoyed heretofore by those who live in large cities where Gas is used. Years of study and much capital have been exhausted in experiments to produce a lamp wherein the ordinary Kerosene or Coal Oil could be used without a chimney, and without unpleasant odor while in use. That fruitful source of expense, trouble and annoyance, the chimney, is in DANFORD'S COAL OIL GAS LAMP avoided; it is the most perfect Lamp and will entirely supersede all other Coal Oil Lamps; it is the cheapest artificial light that can be used, yielding the light of an ordinary six foot Gas burner for less than ½ cent per hour, or double the quantity of light of an ordinary Chimney Lamp, for one third the cost. It will burn when turned down to a taper-light, ten hours for a cent, is free from smoke, can be carried from room to room and the wind will not blow it out. These LAMPS will be on exhibition and for sale at the Music and Art Gallery of Shanahan & Dufrene, corner of Morrison and First streets.

THE ARM-IN-ARM FARCE.—That our readers may more thoroughly appreciate the arm-in-arm farce perpetrated at the Philadelphia Convention, when Custer saluted the rebel flag and the delegates boohooed, we make a few extracts from prominent Southern journals:

[From the Charlottesville (Va.) Chronicle.]

South Carolina walking down the aisle of the Philadelphia Convention, weeping on the bosom of Massachusetts, was one of the most touching pictures since the laying of the Atlantic Cable. If that doesn't melt the North then they are a stolid race. It seemed to us a figure, John C. Calhoun penitentially embracing the knees of John Quincy Adams, crying, "Oh, my Lord, have mercy."

[From the Richmond (Va.) Enquirer.]

Did Mr. Orr go to Philadelphia to confess that his State lay on an extreme as far out from truth and justice as Massachusetts? That she was an equal offender? That, indeed, has often been charged against her, but it has not been confessed until now, when her suffering and her sorrows make it impossible without shame. And by her own son! Perhaps a capacity for dirt-eating is not without its uses, and hence, that Mr. Orr is in the right place; but we reject any implied assumption of Southern leadership or impersonation, for South Carolina, as connected with the late performance.

[From the Mobile Times.]

It must have been a thrilling spectacle when Massachusetts and South Carolina—represented by Gen. Couch and Gov. Orr—entered the Philadelphia Convention arm in arm. One enthusiastic observer, with a strong faculty for similitudes, recognized in this occurrence the fulfillment of the prediction concerning the lion (couch-ant) and the lamb (probably Gov. Orr looked a little sheep-ish) lying together—the ardent affection they professed for each other sufficing for the lying. It is also understood, though the published dispatches do not state it, that they walked under one umbrella—that being regarded as the most perfect symbol of unanimity, suggesting "two souls with but a single thought" (how to escape the rain—viz: the reign of Stevens & Co.) and in compliment to the South, the umbrella was cotton—thereby also denoting the newborn disposition of the Northern and Southern representatives to cotton together. The color of the umbrella was, very appropriately, green.

We no less despise than fear all these unmeaning theatrical displays, of which our country has given so many disgusting spectacles, from the unhitching of Fanny Essler's horses to the vulgar flatteries lavished on the murderers of Poland, when a Russian frigate last visited New York. Our lachrymatory powers (continues the Times), are much too hard to be moved into action, and turn the fountain of tears into the channel of repentance, for what we did and thought, believing it then, as now, just and holy in the eyes of God and man."

[From the Columbus (Ga.) Sun.]

Feeling assured that he would have stood upon his head wrapped in the United States flag, and surrounded by Roman candles, blue and red lights, whirligigs, and all the other pyrotechnic adjuncts known to a first class theatre, if it had been demanded by the managers of the Convention, and would have concentrated public attention upon himself, we are surprised the Governor did not make his advent with the Massachusetts General more appropriate and striking by bearing in his hand the Palmetto tree, while his partner in the procession displayed a dried codfish.

PENNSYLVANIA.—The Tribune's special has the following:

All accounts received here make Pennsylvania certain for General Geary by at least 30,000 majority. The campaign on the part of the radicals is being carried out with great zeal, and the enthusiasm of the people throughout the State show their sentiments. The indications are that the radicals will gain three Congressmen. The two most doubtful districts are the third and fifth, of the county of Philadelphia, represented in the present Congress by Leonard Myers and M. Russell Thayer respectively, both radicals. Myers will be renominated but Thayer declines a renomination. The Copperheads will nominate none but those of the most ultra stripe, and in this manner the radicals, by nominating good men, feel confident of carrying the above-named districts. In Judge Kelley's district (the fourth) the Johnson men are using time and money to defeat Judge Kelley. The Democrats have united with the few renegade Republicans, and have asked no less than a dozen of prominent supposed conservative Republicans of Kelley's own ward to accept a nomination against him, but all refused. Kelley will be renominated by acclamation by the District Convention. His opponent will be A. J. Drexel, the banker. At the last election Kelley's majority was 3,200. It is asserted that the Johnson men have raised $200,000 to carry the Pennsylvania election. This large amount of money, together with the sweeping removals of radicals from Federal offices in the State, recently made by President Johnson, it is believed by the Copperheads will carry the State for Clymer. A number of prominent Pennsylvania Copperhead politicians have been maneuvering around here, and it seems the above is the result of their work. General Rousseau, that fighting patriot of the ultra loyal State of Kentucky, leaves here to aid his Copperhead friends in the Keystone State by relating the story of the Grinnell-Rousseau affair on the stump. No wonder that Johnson men are making such desperate efforts to secure the old Keystone State, for as Pennsylvania goes in October, so will New York, New Jersey, Illinois, and the other States, go in November.

LETTER FROM JOHN G. WHITTIER.—The following interesting letter from John G. Whittier has been received by the Secretary of the Republican State Committee of Massachusetts,

AMESBURY, 8th mo., 24, 1866.

Wm. S. Robinson, Secretary Republican State Committee—Dear Sir: I regret that the state of my health will not allow me the privilege of accepting the invitation of the Republican State Committee of Massachusetts, to meet and welcome the Southern loyalists at Philadelphia, on the 3d of next month. My heart is with these noble men, who came up from the furnace of rebellion without the smell of its infernal fires on their garments. I would like to say to them, and through them to the people of the States they represent, that we yield to none in the desire for the restoration of these States to their place in Congress, in the speediest manner consistent with the safety of the Union—in other words, whenever the rights of their inhabitants are secured, and the monstrous inequality of representation growing out of slavery has become so adjusted that a rebel in South Carolina shall not have double the political power of a loyal white man in one of the New England States. Massachusetts cherishes no hatred towards the South; no representative of hers has withheld his vote for appropriations for its benefit on sectional grounds; no Massachusetts citizen has hesitated to minister to the necessities of Southern cities under the calamities of plague or fire; the same hands that aided the hunted loyalists of East Tennessee have been extended to feed the starving rebels of Savannah. We have no desire of revenge to gratify; and where, in the nature of things, we cannot wholly forget, we are ready to forgive, as we would be forgiven. I am truly thy friend.

JOHN G. WHITTIER.

THE CAMPAIGN IN ILLINOIS.—The campaign in Illinois opens with the promise of a magnificent victory in November. The spirit of 1861 swells the popular heart. The same resolution, the same indignation, the same enthusiasm that burned in the breasts of the people when the news came that traitors were marching on the capitol, are again in full play. We see a like peril impending over the nation—the only difference being a change of leaders. The rebel hordes are again moving on the capitol, and loyal men must come to the rescue. This is the whole substance of the fall campaign. Andrew Johnson hopes to elect enough Copperheads to Congress to constitute, with Orr, and Stephens, and Dick Taylor, and the rest of the pardoned rebels, a majority of the national legislature, whereupon he intends to unseat the loyal Congress and precipitate the country into another civil war. To meet this tremendous peril, and to avert this matchless calamity, the people are coming up in their power and might from every quarter of the State. They will say to Andrew Johnson in November in the tones of thunder: "You shall neither put your whitewashed Confederates in Congress to rule over us, nor shall you draw the sword or rob the treasury of the nation to intimidate our Representatives in the discharge of their lawful duties."

It is for Illinois, which gave Abraham Lincoln to the nation, and which now holds his lamented ashes, to set a glorious example to her sister States in the coming election. To the dead heroes who lie on every battle-field from Belmont to Mobile, we owe the duty of braving the new danger which assails the country, and battling the enemy who comes to conquer at the ballot-box what he could not achieve at the cannon's mouth. The basis of the restored Union must and shall be liberty and loyalty. We fought four years to secure the rights of American citizens in all parts of America, yet we have hardly grounded our arms when we are appalled by the New Orleans massacre, which tells too plainly that the fiendish spirit which brought on the war is alive again, and that it is capable of anything. This spirit must be put down if it takes another war and another generation to do it. Illinois will do her full share of the task, in any kind of a fight that may present itself. She will begin in the November election, and she will keep it up till the last rebel surrenders, and until the principle is established that loyal men have the right to dictate the terms on which conquered traitors may participate in the government of the country.—Chicago Tribune.

ON THE ORIGIN OF PRAIRIES.—The following is an abstract of an interesting paper on The Origin of Prairies, read by Professor J. S. Newberry recently:

Dr. Newberry said that great diversity of opinion existed as to the causes which had produced over half our continent a growth of forests, and over the other half only an herbaceous vegetation, but in this, as in so many other questions that divided the scientific world, if the disputants could meet on common ground, and each study the phenomena observed by others, and not exclusively his own data, there would be comparatively little discord. He had spent some years on the prairies in the various parts of the far West and he felt confident that any one who would go over the ground he had traversed would agree with him that the presence of forests as a general rule depended on the amount of precipitated moisture. The central portion of this continent, as others, was comparatively dry, and was consequently treeless, except on the mountain belts, which acted as condensers, and precipitated an amount of water which sustained a forest growth, the rain-fall was greater in that part of the continent east of the Mississippi, and here we have almost an unbroken forest.

Along the line where the treeless and forest districts meet, local causes determine the presence or absence of trees. Belts of timber bordered the streams and covered the more porous and absorbent soils, while level surfaces, with a fine and unporous soil, sometimes very wet and sometimes very dry, sustained only a growth of grass, which could endure their alternations, fatal to trees. Annual fires had their influence in extending the area of grassy surface, and over much of this middle ground, by man's intervention, the causes limiting the growth of trees could be removed and their forest area extended. The force of nature was here nicely balanced, and slight causes would make one or the other preponderate. The many theories which attributed prairies to other causes than the want of water were wholly erroneous, of only local value. On the great prairies west of the Mississippi, every variety of soil and surface failed to sustain trees, and there only a change of climatic conditions would change the grass-covered surface to forest.

REPORT OF THE INVESTIGATING COMMISSION ON THE NEW ORLEANS RIOTS.—A New York Times New Orleans special of August 25th, says: The Commission appointed by General Baird to investigate the late riot, have completed their labors, and their report will show that the first shot fired from a revolver was by a white man at the procession of freedmen. Twenty minutes then expired before any further disturbance took place. When the procession reached the place where the Convention was in session, the police interfered with it, and, in attempting to make arrests, fired upon the the freedmen, who returned the fire! A mob of citizens then joined the police, and the great massacre commenced. It also shows that several policemen hid their badges, so as not to be recognized, and, after entering the hall, they disregarded the white flag, and fired indiscriminately upon the unarmed members of the Convention and spectators. Some of the citizens wore badges, indicating an organization. Those in the room then, with chairs, &c., drove the police and attacking party out, and barricaded the doors. After the barricade was established, not a single person in the building escaped unharmed, and about thirty were murdered. While credit is given to the police for saving the lives of all who were in the building, and are not now dead, the force is found guilty of nearly all the murders that were committed. The evidence shows that the policemen killed freedmen when they could have arrested them without trouble, and that wounded negroes were thrown in a cart while struggling to free themselves from the dead bodies which had been placed on the top of them.

The Commission will report that the riot was caused by bitter feelings on the part of the citizens and police toward the radical Unionists and freedmen, and will also probably report that it was preconcerted, inasmuch as it is in evidence that it was talked of previously for several days. It is the opinion of the Commission that if the military had not appeared at the time it did, the riot would have progressed to the extermination of all the Unionists and freedmen in the city.

The city press are attacking General Sheridan for what he reported in his official despatches, charging him with untruthfulness."

WISE'S PROPERTY TO BE RESTORED.—General Schofield, who was sent by the President to command at Richmond in place of General Terry, assigned to other duty, has commenced, says the St. Louis Democrat, illustrating the purposes for which he was selected. By his order, all the property formerly belonging to the rebel Wise has been gathered up for restoration to that eminently "loyal" man—of the Johnson stripe. The dispatch, as received in this city, stated that "the present possessors" of such property, officers of the Government who were using it as by law they were authorized to do, were "despoiled of it in a hasty and rather unceremonious manner," but it was Johnsonized by the Republican and that statement carefully omitted. This Wise is the individual who recently declared in a speech that he was a rebel still, had not asked for pardon, and never should. His "chivalric" and "high toned" spirit is promptly rewarded by the extra effort to restore to him all confiscated property. And thus "treason is made odious."

An auctioneer was selling a library at auction. He was not very well read in books, but he scanned their titles, trusted to luck, and went ahead. "Here you have," he said, "Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress; how much 'm I offered for it! How much do I hear for the Pilgrim's Progress, by John Bunyan? 'Tis a first-rate book, gentleman, with six superior illustrations; how much do I hiar? All about the Pilgrims, by John Bunyan! Tells where they came from, an' where they landed! Here's a picture of one of 'em going about Plymouth pedlin,' with a pack on his back!"

The Corporation Act Again.

Yesterday we referred briefly to one of the provisions of the law of this State relating to corporations, and suggested the propriety of its amendment. There is still another point in the same act which we are persuaded could be amended with advantage.

By Section 6 of Chapter VIII of the General Laws, it is provided that the number of directors of any corporate body formed under the laws of this State, shall not exceed seven. Experience has shown that this number is often too small for the purposes of certain kinds of business, and that this provision of the law is an obstruction to the free association of those who wish to engage in several sorts of enterprises.

To illustrate: Not long since it was proposed to incorporate an Oregon Insurance Company with its principal office in Portland. The scheme was one which had active men engaged in it; but it finally failed, mainly on account of the impediment in our law which we have mentioned. There could be no more than seven directors, and parties were loth to enter into so extensive a business arrangement without a greater number. The stockholders at Oregon City, Salem, Dalles, &c., would have insisted on having some of the directors in their respective towns. The number which the law allows was altogether too limited for the business; and the project was accordingly a failure.

This example very well illustrates the need of a change of the law in this particular. In California, a corporation may have any number of directors, and insurance and other companies often have fifty or more. We see no good reason why a similar rule should not prevail here. On the contrary there would seem to be great reason why the fullest freedom in this regard, should not be allowed by the law.

HOMICIDE AT WALLA WALLA.—On Saturday, Sept. 29th, Walla Walla was the scene of another homicide. John Ryan and a man called "Barney," both gamblers, got into a quarrel over a game of cards in Cosgrove's saloon. Barney had beat Ryan in the game when the latter provoked the fight. Barney endeavored to pacify Ryan and tried to get away, but being pressed, turned, and both fired at the same moment. Barney's shot took effect in Ryan's head, passing through the eye and brain, killing him instantly. Barney was unhurt. Ryan was a member of the City Council.

It appears that the Governor of Colorado has issued a certificate of election to Hunt, Administration candidate for Congress, while the Secretary of the Territory has issued a like certificate to Chilcott, the Union Republican candidate. Chilcott's majority, as attested by the Secretary, is one hundred and eight. Hunt will have a bootless pilgrimage to Washington.

OUR SALEM LETTER.

SALEM, Oct. 2, 1866.

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

Most of the members of the Legislature have returned to their stations, and it is noticeable that their faces wear a quiet look, significant of sobriety and a determination to devote the rest of the session as faithfully to the interests of their constituents as they have that which is gone to secure the election of their favorite candidate for Senatorial honors. Notwithstanding this re-enforcement we are still quite lonesome here. There are many faces which once knew us that now know us no longer; and some of them, I fear, will never visit our Capital again. Among them might be mentioned one distinguished in the annals of the Army of the Potomac as the chief letter of shoddy contracts. The vulgar action of our Legislature in showing its inability to appreciate the services of that pure minded Senator who is the idol of the army and the navy, so disgusted the General that he has no doubt secretly vowed that he will never taste another drop of web-foot tonic so long as he lives. What ignorant people, these Oregonians? Ah, me!

MAJOR BERRY'S COMMAND.

Since the departure of the scouting party sent out by the former commander of the striped brigade, (which by the way has not yet returned to report) the encampment two miles east from town has been of somewhat more interest than formerly. The improvements are progressing rapidly; and, notwithstanding the objections which have been urged against the present location, it is in many respects a good one, and under judicious management may be made highly eligible for the purposes contemplated. It would be quite impossible to select a spot which would be entirely free from objections, and it would certainly be a hazardous policy for the State to act upon the hints which have been thrown out by some of our journalists, and abandon the present site after it has been paid for and improved at a cost of many thousands of dollars. Better expend something in overcoming defects than to take the chances of a change.

Incidental to this matter it may be well to notice the new shackle invented by Mr. Gardner, formerly warden of the penitentiary. It is used exclusively about the prison, and is considered by men versed in such matters as perfectly secure, and superior in many respects to the old ball and chain.

LEGISLATIVE.

During the adjournment of the Legislature, Judge Olney and many others of the members have been here busily at work in the preparation of bills, so we may expect a rush of business till the close of the session. The Polk county contest remains to be decided. As there is no Senator to be elected now, it is thought there will be little difficulty in settling that case. Everybody appears to think that Dodson will get his seat, and probably Collins also.

Mr. Humason, moved by his ungovernable passion for sharp practice, attempted to make the House protest against the legality of its own action on the Constitutional amendment, but was shut off by the arrival of the hour for the joint convention on last Saturday. His proposition was to declare the protest entered by the Grant county members against the ratification of the amendment expressive of the sense of the House. It is not at all probable that he will succeed, although he will, perhaps, renew the attempt on the first opportunity. Although there is now a majority of members in the House whose sentiments are against the amendment, Mr. Lockhart, who voted against it, will stand firmly by its friends and prevent it being acted against in this way. It has been said by persons who doubtless knew whereof they spoke, that if it had been necessary to its ratification, Mr. Lockhart would have voted for it.

The new school bill, the proposed amendments to the State Constitution, and a registry law, will be the most important measures before the Legislature. Judging from the opposition with which the proposed change in our Judicial system met—and indeed all measures which look to the expenditure of money—it is to be expected that the school law will have to undergo a severe ordeal; and I fear that by the time it goes through there will not be much of value left in it. It is possible, however, that there is statesmanship and sense enough in the Legislature to give the State a wise and liberal system of common schools.

FROM WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

Our Olympia correspondent furnishes the following items:

On Wednesday, a team belonging to Henry L. Chapman, employed in hauling timbers into town for building purposes, ran away, demolishing the wagon, breaking the leg of one horse, so that it became necessary to kill him, and somewhat injuring the other. Mr. Chapman was also a little bruised, though not seriously. The accident was caused by the breaking of a chain holding the log, which falling, frightened the team. The damage sustained was about $250.

The Tribune of Sept. 29th says: From purser Crosby we learn the following: Saw the U. S. Revenue Cutter Lincoln at anchor near Point-no-point, on Thursday. The Josie had a very heavy gale from south-east to beat against from Port Townsend to Madison; was detained four hours taking in freight from the bark Gold Hunter, which had just arrived from San Francisco. The Charles Devens, also from the Bay city, arrived at Madison as the steamer was leaving. Her freight will be up next trip of the McNair. The rival steamers arrived at this place about the same time, at an early hour on Friday morning, both with a large number of passengers. The Josie was heavily laden with freight for this place and Tum-Water.

Improvements in building are continually increasing. Judge Chalmun laid the foundation for a large building, for the accommodation of the Receiver and Register of the Land Office, yesterday. J. J. Chapman has also begun a new dwelling on Front street.

[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO OCTOBER 3.

A Monetary Speculation in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The Post's money article says the excitement in Wall street continues. It is almost entirely confined to railroad shares. The Commercial says affairs in Wall street continue excited. The gold market shows a renewal of bulling speculation during the apparent weakness of the past few days. An important short interest has been drawn out of the treasury and this morning furnished the basis for a sharp advance. The gold market is unusually active for cash gold and loans. The difference between cash gold and loans is three-eighths per cent. The clique, however, were sellers at an advance, but intimations are thrown out that a still further advance is to be anticipated. The decline of five-twenties at London has favored the advance of foreign exchange. Sales of bills are limited and the demands for to-morrow's steamer is brisk. The excitement in stocks continues. The upward tendency still prevails and at the board the leading stocks were again brighter. After the board there was a slight reaction produced by sales to realize, mostly made by parties outside of the bull clique. Money is without change. There is good inquiry from brokers, owing to the large amount of stocks changing hands, which is generally met. Discounts grow more active.

Household Property Restored to Gen. Lee.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The household effects left at the Arlington Mansion by General Lee, or rather, the fragments remaining of them, were recently delivered to the party authorized by Gen. Lee to receive them. This was done, the National Intelligencer says, under an order from the President. It appears that nearly everything of any value had been stolen. Many valuable heirlooms including some of the family portraits, were taken from the frames, packed in boxes and stored in the upper loft of the mansion since 1861. These boxes have been broken open and everything of real value taken away, and the letters and private papers of Gen. Lee scattered over the loft.

Counterfeit Bank Notes.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—A very dangerous hundred dollar counterfeit on the Central National Bank of this city is in circulation. The only way for the public to protect themselves will be to refuse all one hundred dollar National Bank notes except when received from sources well known. One peculiarity of the counterfeit is that the "T" in the word "maintain" on the right of the bill is defective and looks like the letter "I" but a counterfeiter could soon remedy the defect.

Foreign News.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Foreign files received by the City of Paris to-day furnish a further explanation of the advance of breadstuffs in the English markets. The heavy rains and continued high winds have inflicted serious injury on the crops in the agricultural districts in England and Ireland. In the moorland region the loss will be heavy. The crops remaining in the fields having suffered so that they will only be fit for cattle, while the standing crops rotted at the bottom. Barley oats, peas, and potatoes have all experienced damage. From Scotland the reports are unfavorable; the same observation applies with even greater force to Ireland.

The Pall Mall Gazette gives the following statement of the papal difficulty: While preparing for the eventuality of flight, the Pope is also contemplating the possibility of his being detained captive at Rome, and as a speculation, has drawn up a secret bull, delegating his full powers to a Cardinal whom certain reasons prevents my naming at present. As soon as the Holy Father is taken captive or deprived of his apostolic liberty, this Cardinal will repair to Vienna or London and there publish the bull which is now in his possession. In this document Pius IX names him as his alter ego ad tempus Vicar of the Universal Church—that is, Pope ad interim. All Catholic Bishops, all Priests, and all the faithful are, during the captivity of the sovereign Pontiff, to address themselves to this organ of the Pope reduced to silence, and who will be the Interpreter of Peter in bonds.

Santa Anna's Movements.

NEW YORK, October 2.—Santa Anna was overrun yesterday by parties who are anxious to enter the service of Mexico. It is reported that a firm on South street has been commissioned to buy up six steamers for the service of the Liberals.

The loan of $5,000,000 which Santa Anna was negotiating has been concluded with three banking houses in this city.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Santa Anna's recent visit to Washington and his efforts in favor of Mexican independence did not appear to meet with any sympathy from the American Legation.

Important Law Suit.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—A case came before Judge Clark yesterday in the Supreme Court Chamber, in which Messrs. Jeremiah Beall, W. A. Beall, and Thomas Metcalf complain that L. B. Brasher, formerly Treasury agent of the U. S. Government, took from them illegally in February, 1866, at Albany, Georgia, some three hundred bales of cotton, valued at $90,000. Brasher was arrested and held to bail in the sum of $70,000. The case came before the court on a motion to discharge the order of the first. After hearing the argument of counsel Judge Clark reversed his decision.

The New Orleans Massacre.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The Herald's New Orleans special says Major Monroe has furnished a message to the City Council of New Orleans in which he claims that the members of the Free State Convention of 1864 were responsible for the riots of July 30th in that city.

The Times' New Orleans correspondent says information has been received there that the general Government will sustain the Governor in removing men who failed to hold elections for the convention of delegates in accordance with his proclamation.

Gen. Slocum to have an Office.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The World's Washington correspondent says: It is understood that Gen. Slocum is to be tendered an important foreign mission.

Trial of Fenians.

The Herald's special says: The Fenian prisoners in Toronto will be tried next week.

Dix Accepts the Mission to France.

The Herald's Washington special says: General Dix will only hold his appointment as naval officer for a few days. He has accepted the mission to France, which, I understand, was offered to him with Mr. Seward's full and cordial approval. Whether this fact is an indication of a change in our foreign policy I must leave you to infer from the General's well known opinions in regard to Mexico and the Monroe doctrine.

The French Minister's Son shot by Liberals in Mexico.

The Marquis De Montholon, Minister of France to this country, has received no further tidings in regard to the fate of his son, an officer in the French army, and reported to have been captured and shot by the Liberals in Mexico. The absence of all information and intelligence of young Montholon since July, added to the rumor of his capture and death, creates a most painful solicitude on the part of his distinguished parents, who have the warm sympathies of a large circle of friends.

OUR SAN FRANCISCO DISPATCH.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 3.—The Pacific Mail Steamship Company's steamer Golden City, arrived from Panama at four o'clock this morning with dates to the 11th ult. China dates to July 13th say that the rebels in the Province of Yong-Chow, are much more formidable than had been supposed, every leader sent to oppose them, except one, having met with defeat in one battle. The younger brother of the Viceroy lost 200 Enfield rifles, and out of 1000 cavalry engaged, only 100 escaped. The state of the infantry was believed to have been no better.

The steamer Orizaba arrived last evening from Portland, with $297,000 in treasure.

Coles Bashford was elected to Congress by 3000 majority over Paston, in Arizona.

The coroner's inquest on the explosion of the steamer Julia's steam drum, was concluded at three o'clock this P. M. The jury rendered a verdict fully exonerating the engineer and officers of the boat from blame.

Queen Emma visited several public schools of this city yesterday. Subsequently, she visited the Mission Woolen Mills. She visited the fortifications in the harbor on the steamer Shubrick. Her Majesty was more than pleased with what she saw and the attentions paid her.

Gen. H. M. Naglee has filed his answer in the breach of promise suit brought against him by Mary L. Schell, to recover $100,000 damages. He denies that he ever promised to marry her, and avers that her conduct has been unchaste and immoral since the time of such supposed promise of marriage; that her character and reputation are bad, and that the facts of her bad reputation were not known to him until the time of the supposed promise of marriage.

A letter from the Western Union Extension Telegraph party, dated at St. Michel's, North West Coast, Aug. 24, says the ships from San Francisco had not arrived, but were expected daily. The telegraph employees had had no direct news from the outer world for more than a year. Col. Kennicott, leader of the St. Michel's party, died suddenly at Mikato Bay last May. The remainder of the party were well. Stores were plenty and Russian officials had treated the party with great kindness and hospitality.

The Johnson Union County Convention convened at 10 o'clock this morning. After a temporary organization it adjourned until 3 o'clock P. M. The Democratic State Convention met in this city at 12 M. to-day, organized temporarily and adjourned until 2:30 P. M.

CROUP!

A FEARFUL RESPONSIBILITY RESTS UPON THOSE CHARGED WITH THE CARE OF CHILDREN. A CARELESS NEGLECT IN THE TIMELY USE OF A WELL-KNOWN, SAFE AND CERTAIN REMEDY FOR THAT MOST COMMON AND DANGEROUS COMPLAINT CALLED CROUP, SHOULD SUBJECT THE PARTY TO THE SEVEREST CENSURE, WHEN IT IS WELL KNOWN THAT A BOTTLE OF NEWELL'S PULMONARY SYRUP WOULD HAVE WARDED OFF THE ATTACK. MOTHERS AND NURSES, KEEP IT BY YOUR BEDSIDE, AND USE IT WITHOUT FEAR, UPON THE FIRST SYMPTOM, AND WITH A CERTAINTY OF IMMEDIATE RELIEF! NEWELL'S PULMONARY SYRUP IS CONFIDENTLY RECOMMENDED AS A SURE CURE FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, CROUP, WHOOPING COUGH, AND ALL PULMONARY COMPLAINTS. IF YOU BUT TRY IT YOU WILL NEVER WISH TO BE WITHOUT IT. REDINGTON & CO., AGENTS, 416 AND 418 FRONT STREET, SAN FRANCISCO, AND SOLD BY MEDICINE VENDERS EVERYWHERE. sep1d1m2p

The committee on streets and public improvements reported in favor of the opening and extension of Washington street. Report adopted.

Committee on river improvements reported upon the bill of Bolton, that for failure in the performance of contract, a deduction of $250, and upon bill of Oregon Iron Works that the charge for paterns be deducted; also upon bill of Sylvester Potter, $27 50, for wood furnished. The report was adopted and warrant ordered drawn for Bolton and Potter, and in the matter of the bill of the Oregon Iron Works, it was laid upon the table.

A communication from officer Walker on the steam dredger, who reports that the following is the amount of work performed by the steam dredger at the mouth of the Willamette river during the week ending Saturday, September 29th 1866:

Monday, 24th—Spent all day in getting the crane post [illegible] place and doing other necessary repairs.

Tuesday, 25th—Removed six scow loads or 300 cubic yards, broke hoisting chain twice

Wednesday, 26th—Six loads, 300 cubic yards, broke hoisting chain twice.

Thursday, 27th—Seven loads, 350 cubic yards, broke hoisting chain once.

Friday, 28th—Spent the day in repairing chain, taking out bad links and welding in new, and lining up fore and aft, as they got out of line by the hugging of the machine.

Saturday, 29th—Seven loads, 350 cubic yards. broke hoisting chain once

Total for the week 25 loads, or 1,300 cubic yards

The hoisting chain has given us more trouble and occasioned more delay in the past week than anything else and I hope no time will be lost in procuring a new one that shall be of better material than this, as I think this [illegible] sufficiently large if it was of good iron, but many of the links I find were never welded at all and others are of so poor iron that they are easily broken. The hog frame has also shown some signs of weakness, and I am putting in extra fastening bolts and hog chains, also new bolts into the knees, that were neglected in the laying of building the machine

I moved ahead in the channel during the week about 75 feet, making it 18 feet deep and 60 feet wide. The whole length excavated is about 400 feet, and if I should proceed in the present channel I have no doubt I could finish it in [illegible] of three months and make it permanent, as I have no fears of the material we are now working in [illegible]. But it is proposed that I should put the dredger into the ship channel this week, to try and keep the steamers coming to Portland all the [illegible] but I cannot promise to do that, as the material there is entirely different from that we have here—a loose running quicksand—and I fear dredging will do very little good. I find the water is deepening there [illegible] since removing the snags, as I found from 4 to 6 inches more water last Saturday than at the previous Saturday. The snag boat has been doing good work there in the past week. Following is her memoranda.

Monday, 24th—Removed 4 trees, with a large quantity of roots and other obstructions

Tuesday, 25th—Four trees, with limbs, roots, &c. raised [illegible] chain for dredger

W[illegible], 26th—Five trees, raised chain for dredger

Thursday, 27th—Four trees, with a large quantity of other roots, &c.

Friday, 28th—Four trees, roots, limbs, &c

Saturday, 29th—Four trees

The removal of these roots, limbs, and other obstructions helps to clear out the land more than removing the trees, as it is not uncommon to bring up a mass of roots from 10 to 20 feet across, with a large quantity of earth adhering to them, and it makes a material difference in the depth of the water when one of those large roots is taken out.

The men are beginning to work very much better, as the windlasses are getting worn smooth and I have strong hopes of being able to report 7 and 8 loads for every day this week, if our chains don't detain us too much. I remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. E. WALKER,
Engineer

POLICE COURT.—In Police Court yesterday the case of J H Andrews and wife, on the second charge, complained of by A. W. Best, was discharged. The case of those [illegible] spoken of in yesterday morning's issue as having been previously acted upon and the parties were yesterday arrested. Wilson was charged with disorderly conduct and using profane language on Front street, plead guilty to the charge and was fined $5 and costs. J P Peters was arrested upon charge of [illegible] for the steamer Montana without a license. He was fined $15

FOUND DEAD.—On last evening about 6 o'clock, a man went into one of the bathing establishments in our city and was shown into the bathroom. After about an hour and a half had elapsed the door was tried and found still [illegible]. The door being opened the man was found dead in the bath tub. We have no means as yet of [illegible] the cause of his death. Men were in the [illegible] adjoining all the time and yet no noise was heard. The man is supposed to be a Mr. Knight, of Day[illegible]. The coroner's inquest to-day will probably devel op further [illegible]

[illegible].—The $55,000 shipped yesterday on the steamer Oriflamme, for San Francisco, by Messrs. Ladd & Tilton was silver bricks, 29 in number, from the [illegible]. This is certainly substantial evidence of the richness of this celebrated mine of which so much has been said and written. The fame of this Poorman is not confined to this coast, as we are informed of the visit of Mr. Fenk of [illegible] notoriety, who left his home in New York and [illegible] hand for the sole purpose of examining the mine. He returned East on the last steamer from this place

[illegible].—The steamer Montana, yesterday took the following freight 25 bbls pitch, 3 boxes tobacco; [illegible] and heading, 50 boxes fruit, 2 cases do; 3 [illegible]; 2 kegs cider, 20 [illegible] kegs, 18 cases in [illegible]; 11 trunks do; 3 pkgs do; 1 bbl do; 1 cask do; 2 [illegible]; 120 bbls Salmon; 5 hlf bbls do; 73 [illegible] bacon; 52 bxs eggs, 3 kegs do; 4½ hlf bbls split [illegible]; 20 ½ sks flour; 5 dry hides; 3 bxs copper ore

[illegible].—We learn that Judge T D Humphrey of [illegible], had a valuable horse stolen from his premises last week. The horse was in an enclosure near the house, and was taken out at about 8 o clock in the evening, as he was missed soon after. The gate of the enclosure was found firmly fastened when the horse was missed. No trace has yet been found of the thief.

TREASURE.—The steamship Oriflamme which sailed yesterday at 1 o'clock, took the following amounts of treasure:

Wells, Fargo & Co.	$65,000
Ladd & Tilton	55 000

STREET FIGHT.—At one o clock yesterday an affray occurred on First street, near the Union hotel. A man who was evidently suffering from the effects of bad whisky, got into an altercation with a man near DeWitt's store. From words they soon came to blows in which as a matter of course, the drunken man was arrested. The men were separated, and the drunken man then staggered across the street where he soon got into another [illegible]. A fight occurred between him and a Frenchman in which the unfortunate was badly bruised. It does not speak highly of any one's manliness to [illegible] and kick a drunken man—no matter if he has offended him. We will soon learn more of the matter

THE STEAMERS.—The steamer Montana got upon the bar at the mouth of the river and remained there until the arrival of the Hunt which hauled her off. A number of passengers got off of the Hunt at the mouth of the river and took passage upon the Oriflamme for San Francisco

The undersigned who has always enjoyed public confidence for the excellent quality of his Coffee, neglects nothing to justify the good name acquired by his productions, the sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise which commands here and in the markets of the interior a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G. VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud can deceive nobody after a trial, but only adds to the favorable opinion of the consumers the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless buyers should be forewarned and placed on their guard against this practice

One Step More

What though before me it is dark,
Too dark for me to see
I ask but light for one step more—
'Tis quite enough for me

Each little humble step I take
The [illegible]
Still though the way is dark beyond
I never am perplexed

And if sometimes the mist hangs close—
So close I fear to stray—
Patient I wait a little while,
And lo, it clears away

I would not see my further path
For mercy veils it so
My present path might harder be
Did I the future know

It may be that my path is rough
Thorny and hard and steep
And knowing this, my strength might fail
Through fear and terror deep

It may be that it winds along
A smooth and flowery way
But seeing this, I might despise
The journey of to-day

Perhaps my path is very short
My journey nearly done
And I might tremble at the thought
Of ending it so soon

Or if I saw a weary length
Of road that I must wend
Fainting I'd think, "My feeble powers
Will fail me ere the end"

And so I do not wish to see
My journey, or its length
Assured that, through my Father's love
Each step will bring me strength.

Thus step by step I onward go,
Not looking far before,
Trusting that I shall always have
Light for just "one step more."

Far at Sea.

I

"Ah!" I says, "you've been a hard and bitter mother to me and it goes against the grit to turn one's back upon you. I've toiled on, and lived hard, and yet you've always showed me a cold cruel face" and as I said that, feeling quite heart sick I leans my elbows on the side of the ship and my chin on my hands, and has a long long look at the country as we was leaving—perhaps never to see again

I looked round, and there stood plenty tearful eyed and sad, with all the lines of sorrow marked in their foreheads, while I could see lips trembling and breasts working with the pain they could hardly keep down. And then, I don't know how it was, but it seemed to me that we thought together the same sad things, and that I knew their thoughts and they knew mine. There was all the old life plain as could be, and then came the long, long struggle with sickness, and death, and want, and I know that people said such poor folk should not marry, and many another bitter word, as if it was wrongful to love and try to be happy. The wind whistled through the ropes above our heads, and the clouds seemed gathering, too, in our hearts, for though the bitterness was now gone, I could see plenty of sorrow and sadness all around

"Won't do, my lad," I says, rousing up and wetting both hands as if I meant work, and then I goes down in the steerage to try and make things a bit comfortable, for you see all the poor things were in a most miserable condition. Some was ill, some down-hearted, some drunk and foolish, some drunk and noisy, some drunk and quarrelsome. Then, there was children crying, and women scolding, and altogether it was anything but a cheering prospect for the night, for, as you may say, we weren't shook down into shape yet

"Good time coming," I says cheerily, and having no young ones of my own, I set to to help them as had. I got hold of a shaver—about two and a half, I should think—and he was a letting go right away as if he'd got all the trouble in the ship in his precious young head. But he soon turned quiet, playing with my knife, and all at once I finds he had made a hammock of me, and had gone off as sound as a church. During the next three days its mother was very ill, poor thing, and I had to regularly mind the little one and I did too

Well, 'tisn't a very pleasant life in the steerage of an emigrant ship bound for New Zealand, 'specially if the weather's a bit rough, and so we found it. For the next morning, when I went on deck, there was stiff breeze a blowing, the ship keeling over, and as I thought the night before so it was—there was nothing in sight but waves all around. One sailor did point to something which he said was home, but it might have been a cloud.

The fourth night had come, and as I lay in my berth listening to the "wash wash" of the water past the side of the ship, the creaking and groaning of the timbers, and every now and then the heavy bump of a wave against the side, I couldn't help thinking what a little there was between us and death, and somehow or other the serious thoughts that came kept me wide awake.

It was two bells, I think they call it, for they don't count time as we do ashore, when all at once I could hear as there was a great bustle up on deck, where all through the watches of the night everything's mostly very quiet. Then there came a great deal of tramping about and running to and fro; so I gets out of my berth, slips on one or two things, and goes cautiously up the ladder and gets my head above the hatchway, and then in a moment I saw what was up, and it gave me such a shock that I nearly let go my hold and fell back into the steerage. There was a thick cloud of smoke issuing out from between the hatches, right in the centre of the ship, and almost before I could thoroughly realize it all, or make myself believe as it was true, a woman ran shrieking along the deck in her night-dress, and calling out those fearful words on board ship—

"Fire! fire! fire!"

Hundreds of miles from land, standing on a few nailed-together pieces of wood, and them burning beneath your feet.

I couldn't help it, all my bitter feelings of being ill-used came back, and I says to myself,

"Your usual luck, mate, wouldn't be you if you weren't unfortunate. But never mind, you have your choice, fire or water." And then I thought of the danger, and I ketches myself such a thump in the chest, and rolls up my sleeves and goes up to the captain as was busy giving his orders

"What shall I do?" I says.

"Pump!" he shouts, "and fetch a dozen more up."

Lord bless you! I had 'em up in no time from amongst the crying women, and I found time, too, to get the women and children up on deck in the poop, which was the furtherest from the hatches, where the smoke kept pouring out, beside which the wind took it away from them.

There was plenty of shrieking and screaming at first; but they had got the right man in the right place when they chose that captain, for he runs to the poop, where all the shivering things was a standing, and with a few words he quiets them. Then he runs to the men as was scuffling about, here, there, and everywhere, and gets them all together, and then at last he gets a line of fellows with buckets, a lot more at the pumps, and some more at the little engine as was there, and then, when all was ready, and every man was standing still at his post, he goes with some more to the hatches and drags up a couple, when up rose a regular pillar of fire and smoke with a snaky, quiet movement, and in a moment every face was lit up, and there was quite a glare spreading far out to sea. Sails, cordage, masts, everything seemed turned into gold. For a moment I could not help forgetting the danger, and thinking what a beautiful sight it was; when directly after there was a regular ringing cheer, the engine and pumps went "clang clang," and the water was teemed into the burning hold from bucket and engine-nozzle.

How the water hissed and sputtered! while volumes of smoke and steam rushed up where it had been all flame but a moment before; and as we saw this we cheered, but we'd nothing to cheer for. It was only the fire gathering strength; and then, as though laughing at the water we poured in, it came dashing and crawling and running up, licking the edges of the hatchway, and setting on fire the tarpaulins at the sides, and then it began to shoot and leap as if to catch at the cordage and sails.

"Pour it in, my lads," shouted the captain. "Don't be afraid, we shan't run short of water, like they do at your London fires."

"No," says a chap on my side, "and there ain't no running away into the next street."

Then I saw the captain run to the man at the wheel, and he changed the course of the ship, so that all the smoke and flame went over the side, and then at it we went, sending in the water at a tremendous rate, but to all appearance it did no good—not a bit.

"Now, my lads," says the captain, "with a will;" and then he cheered again, and that noble fellow stood with the engine nozzle in his hand, leaning right over the fiery hole, where the flames darted out scorching him, and there he stood battling with them and aiming the water where he thought best.

I can see I stood close as I could by him so that I could see all as he did—a brave fellow—and it was hot, too. You know I was taking the buckets as they were passed to me, and sending the water in with a regular splash as far as I could every time, and the captain nodded at me every now and then, and "Well done!" he says, when it was him as ought to have had the praise.

It was like looking down into the mouth of a furnace, and as far as I could see, we might just as well have been playing with a couple of boys' squirts; but I kept on, though I felt what I ought to [illegible] and though I'd have liked to have been outside the [illegible] comfort but my duty was to stand there a pouring in that there water till I couldn't do it no longer; and the more it didn't seem no good, the more I warmed up to [illegible] life and meant to try, for I didn't see any fun in being beaten off by a few flames and sparks; while the look as I got now and then from the captain went right through me, and in went the water.

All at once a lot of the sailors stops pumping and one shouts out,

"Taint no good, mates! Boats out!"

But he hadn't hardly said it before I saw the captain dart back, and then there was a bright light as the copper branch of the hose pipe flashed through the air and then down came the sailor to the deck.

"Back to your work, men!" sang out the captain, "and let a man go to the boat who dares!" And then they stood hanging about muttering, and one Dutch chap pulls out a knife. Just at the same minute two a couple of the sailors as had been handing me the buckets strikes work too, a saying they'd be hanged if they'd stop there and be frizzled.

I felt that if the men did as they liked it would be all over with us, and that meant a regular rush to the boats, while the poor women and children were left to burn; so what did I do but I ups with the leather bucket I had in my hand—I've often laughed since—and brings it down like a 'stinguisher right on the top of No. 1's head; as to t'other—he was a little chap and I'm six foot and pretty strong—I gets hold of him by the scruff of the neck and straps of his trousers, and afore he knew where he was I had him up in the air and over the hole where the flames were pouring up, and so close too that he could feel the scorching; and then—I ain't much given to swearing—but I rapped out something fierce, that if he didn't work I'd hurl him in.

Lord, you should have heard what a shriek there was as the fellow twisted about like an eel to get away, and then I put him a little nearer, when he begged and prayed to be put down, and he'd work till he dropped; and then up comes the captain, for he'd bolted off into the cabin, but now rushed out again with a revolver in each hand.

"Well done, my man!" he shouts to me, for he saw what I did, and then he gives me one of the pistols and swore he'd shoot the first man as disobeyed, and I'm blessed if I didn't believe he would if they'd have tried it on. But they didn't, but began pumping away like mad again, and we two went to work, pouring in the water, while I'm sure I heard a regular groan from the captain, though his face was like a bit o' wood.

This didn't take above five minutes, but I believe it lost us the ship, though we had seemed to make such a little impression when we turned on the water. But five minutes at such a time was ruin. The flame rose higher and higher, and the heat was awful, so that, do what we would, we were beat back, and instead of a quiet crawling flame now, there was a regular roar, and the wind set towards the great fiery tongue in a fierce draught.

"Stick to it, my man," says the captain, in a low voice. "It's our only chance."

"And I wouldn't give much for it, sir," I says, in the same tone.

"Hush!" he says, and then to the men, "Pump away, my lads!"

They pumped away hearty enough, and kept trying on a cheer; but it soon could be seen with half an eye that the ship must go, for the flames darted up, and, almost before you knew it, the rigging was on fire, and the tongues like leaping from rope to rope till the tarry things blazed furiously right up to the mainmast head, and little fiery drops of burning tar kept falling on to the deck, or hissing into the sea, while far enough off out into the dark night, the great fiery sparks went flying along, for all the world like a beautiful golden storm.

"There," says the captain, throwing down the copper branch with which he had played on the fire, and shaking his fist right in the flames, so that they must have burnt it, "there," he says, savagely, "I've fought it out with you, and you've beat! Now, for life saving!"

And then, quietly and coolly he had one boat lowered down, with the first mate in and a crew of sailors, and the shrieking women and children lowered in, while the quiet ones he kept back. Then there was a water-cask and a lot of biscuit bags thrown in, and that boat, well loaded, pushed off on the calm sea and lay to, watching us. Then the second mate was ordered into the second boat with a crew of sailors, water and bags of biscuit were thrust in, and then, well loaded with women and children, and one or two of the men passengers, that was carefully lowered down, unhooked and pushed off.

The other two boats were not swung over the sides, but lay between the masts of the ship, right in the middle of the deck, and were full of stores and old things put there to be out of the way; but the captain and men left soon, had tackling fastened to the boat that was right in front of the fire, and it was hauled up, swung clear, and lowered down with a couple of men in, and they rowed it back to the hinder part of the ship, while we who had been launching it had to make a regular dash through the flames, which now extended nearly across the deck. One man, however, did not dare to come through, but plunged overboard and swam after the boat till he was took in.

"Now, then," said the captain, and the rest of the women were slung down.

I did not mean to go as long as I could help the captain, and then half a dozen of the men passengers were lowered down, and they were just going to shove off, when I shouts out.

"Stop!" and the captain turns round angrily to me, and I says "no water!"

Sure enough they had none, and a little cask that stood on the deck was slung down, and they were going to shove off again, when I heard a shriek as went through and through me, and saw a bright glare, the man at the rudder leaned over, while at the same moment there was a roar and a rush of fearful light and the great mainmast blazing from top to bottom, and covered with burning rope and canvas, toppled over towards where the boat lay, for the fire had been eating into it below deck for long enough. It was all in a moment, and like the flashing of some great sheet of lightning, as in the midst of a wild and fearful cry it fell right towards the boat.

II

That was a fearful moment, that was, and we held our breath with terror, and I—I could not help it—I covered my face with my hands and dared not look, till I heard a loud cheer, and saw the boat floating within a very few yards of the half extinct mast which had narrowly missed falling upon the little haven of safety.

And now they were going to get the last boat out, and the three others lay off at a little distance, while above the hoarse orders of the captain there was the cracking and roar of the flames now leaping up at a fearful rate. And yet it was a splendid sight, in spite of the horror, for every now and then pieces of the copper wire rope used in the rigging regularly caught fire and burned with a most beautiful blue light, brighter than in any firework I ever saw; while now the foremast had taken fire, and the flames were tearing along the rigging until the ropes seemed illuminated with little beads and tongues of fire. The heat grew awful, and every now and then pieces of blazing rope, spars and blocks fell red hot and glowing into the sea, to send up little columns of hissing steam. The whole of the center of the ship was now on fire, and the flames rose prodigiously, floating amidst the clouds of smoke, while far away, still lightly flitted about the golden fiery snow eddying among the smoke and darting far on high, in the most beautiful way imaginable.

I think I said before how the tremendous heat caused a regular draught to set towards the fire, so that as you were almost scorched before the wind came with a cold rush behind; but then how it made the flames to roar again and burn more fiercely than ever! It was a sickening sight, for every now and then the cruel forky tongues seemed to keep lapping at and threatening us, and then dancing and licking everything up, as if in devilish joy at the prospect of soon devouring us poor sinners.

It was a horrible sight, and though I didn't show it, yet I could feel my heart sink every time I was idle for a few moments, when I went at it again like a savage. I didn't go on my knees to pray; but—I don't know—I think I prayed earnestly in my heart then, and though I would gladly have been with the wife safe in the other boat, yet I couldn't feel as it was suited with a fellow's duty to leave such a man as the captain had showed himself all in the lurch; so I says to myself

"Be a man, too, Phil!" and I did try to anyhow.

All at once the flames seemed to veer round and began blowing toward us, while the position of the boats were changed, and I couldn't understand it till I saw the captain run from helping to get the last boat—the one as was on the deck close to the mizzen-mast—over the side, and then I found as the man had left the steering wheel and had run up toward the boat.

"Back!" I heard the captain say, "back, or I'll fire."

"Fire away, captain," says the man sulkily, "one may just as well die by fire one way as another, and I won't stand there and be burnt." And then the captain's hand—the one as held the pistol—fell down by his side, and he looked regularly [illegible].

"What's up?" I says. "Can I do?" and I followed the captain to the wheel, which he turned so as to put the head of the ship right in [illegible] and as he did it she just changed round again, but while all this was going on the mizzen and the third mast took fire, and now was blazing away fiercely.

"Hold on here, my man," says the captain, "and keep the wheel just as it is. That's right; hold the spokes firm, and if her head swings round, call to me to come and help you."

"All right," I says, "but mind I don't understand it a bit." And now my troubles seemed to begin, for though it was hard enough to be bustling about fancying that the ship would either go down or you'd be burnt every moment, yet to stand stock still holding on to the spokes of that wheel was awful, and to what I would to stop it, a regular tremble came all over me and my knees kept on shake, shake, shake.

They got the boat over the side and then the men rushed over one another to get in, and it was only by stamping about and hitting at them that the captain got the poor chaps to take in the things they wanted, such as food, which he fetched out of the cabin himself, and water, which they was slinging in, but dropped one little cask overboard. But one way or another he got them at last to take in a good many things such as they'd want, and a compass, and then with three more men he rushed down to the cabin again for more food—biscuit bags—saying as the other boats would want more, and that we must supply 'em. And then up they came staggering and shaking, one man with a little water keg, and the captain with a side o' bacon, and two men with bags of biscuit, and they goes to the side, and I wished my job was done as I saw 'em go.

All at once one of the men gives a yell, throws down his bag and leaps bang overboard, and the others running after him did so too, and then I could see that the cowardly beggars had pushed off—for they lay close under the side where I couldn't see 'em before, and now they were rowing hard to get away, and I could see that the boat was so full that the least thing must make her fill and sink.

It was painful to hear the shrieks of those poor fellows as was left behind, as they swam with all their might to get up to the boat, and it was pitiful to see, for it was as light as day, and the waves that gently rose and fell seemed waves of blood—glowing blood—with golden crests as they softly broke. But though one man swam so fast that he got up to the boat, they pushed him off with the oars, and then I saw him cling to them, and one man pulled out a knife to stab at him if he came nearer, while just then I saw the boat hook go up and fall with a heavy thud on the poor chap's head, and he went under, and I said "God help him!" for he came up no more.

There were two more swimming after them, and when the next saw all this he just turned round and looked back at the ship, and paddled with his hands a bit, and then stretching them straight up toward the sky, he gave one wild bitter shriek, and he went under, and this time I tried to say, "God help him!" but it was only my lips that moved.

There was the other though, a fine lusty young fellow, and as soon as he saw what took place he turned off to the left, and tried to reach the nearest boat of the other three, and manfully he swam for it, raising himself well up in the water at every stroke and gradually lessening the distance till he got close up to the stern, where I could see quite plain some one holding out his hands to him, and he was took aboard the boat.

Now all this took place in a very few minutes, and, in spite of the danger, we the two left on board, could not help stopping to gaze at the terrible accident, but now the captain comes up and takes my hand, and says

"Brother, it was a cowardly, cruel, selfish action, and I don't know but what I'd rather die with a brave man than live with curs."

I know my hand shook, but I don't think my voice did, though I thought of life being sweet as I said to him

"Is it very hard to die, captain?"

"Yes," he says, "I believe it is to a strong man, and as God gave us life, and we've done our duty so far, why he must finish it by trying to save two more."

But how? I says, getting hold of him.

"Don't leave the wheel," he says, and then again, "but it don't matter—she makes no way. Lend a hand here."

And I helped him, and together roasting almost we dragged three great fowl coops and a grating to the side, and he tied them together—lashed them, he called it—in no time, then we shoved them overboard, and as the vessel slowly swung round we were out o' sight o' the boats, which were about a quarter of a mile off. He had a rope to the coops so that they could not float off, and as he told me I slid down on to them and squatted there trembling, while he lowered down to me the little water keg, some rope, the bacon and two of the biscuit bags. Then he pitched some loose pieces of wood-work, and the cover of the cabin stairs, and a hatch thing, and a tarpaulin into the water by me, slid down the rope, and was by my side in a few minutes, with the coops sinking about, so that I was glad to lower myself into the water and held on.

"That's right," he says, opening his knife with his teeth, and cutting the rope, and then getting the tarpaulin and bits of wood and things in the centre in the handiest way possible—same as only a sailor could do. He tells me to hold on tight, and then lowering himself into the water, he pushes off from the burning ship, and begins swimming and guiding our bit of raft away very slowly, but still further and further off.

"I'll lash the coops and the grating together," he says, "as soon as we're out of danger."

"Out of danger!" I says, "and when will that be?"

"Well," he says, "I mean when we are out of reach of being sucked down when she sinks."

"Will she sink?" I says.

"Yes," he says, "and before long now;" and then he went on swimming hard, while I could do nothing but watch first the boats and then the burning ship.

It was grand, though awful, to see the noble vessel standing there like a pyramid of fire whose heat we could yet feel in our scorched faces. From every part now the flames were rushing, even from the cabin windows beneath where I had been so lately standing, and I could hardly keep from shuddering as I thought of the awful danger.

It was hard work forcing the raft through the water, on account of the breeze which set toward the ship, but we got further and further away and were some distance off when the mizzen mast went blazing over the side; but still the captain said we were not safe, and swam on till we could feel the breeze, and at length panting and exhausted, he hung on motionless, and said we must risk it now.

Then we were both silent, and watched the boats now further away from us, and the blazing ship seeming to be the centre of a glorious ring of light, on the outside of which, like sparks, we all lay waiting for the end we knew was sure to come. Everywhere else was dark as pitch, not even a star was to be seen, while the waves just rose and curled a little over as they washed against our raft, excepting the dull roar and crackle of the flames, everything was as still as death.

All at once I started, for the Captain spoke sadly as he looked at his vessel, and out of the silence his voice sounded wild and strange.

"If I'd had a crew like you, my man, I think we could have saved her!" and then he spoke no more, for just then from being quite still the good ship seemed to roll a little toward us, and then to the other side slowly, as if just bending to the breeze, and then we could almost see the water creeping up her burning sides as clouds of steam arose, and with one calm, steady dip forward, she seemed to plunge right down beneath the golden waters. Then there was a rising and falling of the sea, and a deep, dense darkness, out of which close by me came one of the bitterest, heart tearing sobs I ever heard from the breast of man, and I did not speak, for I felt that it was the captain sorrowing for the loss of his good ship.

For a good piece the silence was as deep as the darkness, and then the captain was the first to break it in quite a cheerful voice.

"Can you lay your hand on the rope?" he says, and I passed it to him, and then I could hear him in the dark busily at work, tying and fastening, and at last he says, "Now crawl on again; it will bear you better." And faint and weary I managed to crawl on, and lay with my legs in the water and my head on the bag of biscuit, and directly after, I felt him crawl on too, and we took hold of hands, and lay there in the deep darkness, while he said that prayer out aloud in such a soft, deep voice—that prayer as we first learnt at kneeling down years ago by our mother's knee. When he came to "Deliver us from evil," he stopped short, and soon worn out there in the great ocean floating on a few pieces of wood, we both fell in which hands we were and slept till the warm bright sun shone upon us and told us that another day was here.

The first thing the captain did was to stand up and look round, and then he said he could see only one boat; but he he stood up one of the pieces of wood and wedged it in the coop, with a handkerchief flying at the top, after which we made a hearty meal of the biscuit, raw bacon and water. After this the captain got one of the coops on the other, and by binding and lashing, he made a much higher and better raft, so that we could keep our biscuit and bacon out of the water and sit dry ourselves.

And so we lay all that day till toward evening, when we found that the boat was coming toward us, and just at dusk it was within hail, and if ever I'd felt hopeful or joyful before in my life it was then. They had no room for us, but they took us in tow, and the weather keeping calm we all rowed and worked by turns, steering according to the captain's direction for the nearest land, for when our turn came we two went into the boat at [illegible] there came [illegible] upon the raft and [illegible] days when one morning there was a joyful cry.

"A sail! A sail!"

And it was too, within a mile of us, plainer and plainer as that glorious sun rose, and the same laughed and some cried, and one or two seemed half mad with joy, and after a while she ran down towards us, and proved to be a British man, homeward bound.

In a month or two we landed back in the port I left, with [illegible] clothes, without money, but with [illegible] and true a friend in Captain Ellis as ever walked. [illegible] life and with it came hope and [illegible] since then it [illegible] have prospered with me in the old country—the cold home that I once left to go far at sea.—All the Year Round.
